Though it is one of the most dynamic regions of world capitalism, the Brazilian public knows little about South Asia. But the recent student rebellion in Bangladesh has brought to the fore this region marked by instability, which includes populous countries such as Bangladesh, Pakistan and India.

To find out more about politics in the region, Israel Dutra interviewed veteran leader Farooq Tariq, one of the biggest names on the Pakistani left. Tariq is also a leader of the Fourth International with whom the Socialist Left Movement (MES/PSOL) have maintained fraternal relations for many years, with leading members such as Pedro Fuentes and Luciana Genro taking part in events in Pakistan.
