The scale and intensity of this movement is unprecedented in Serbia's recent history – and in the entire history of student movements in Europe. The students have gained widespread support in academia and beyond. Around 5,000 university professors signed an online letter of solidarity, and by the end of December 2024, 85 universities – 74 per cent of the country's universities – had joined the protests. Farmers blocked Serbia's main highway in December, and artists, high school students, teachers, education unions, lawyers, and media associations have also expressed their support, with 73 schools suspending classes in solidarity with the students.
