The year 2026 began with devastating Russian shelling of Kyiv's infrastructure, which, in freezing conditions, brought the population to the brink of survival. The city, home to 3 million people, is experiencing an acute shortage of heat and water, and electricity is being supplied on a short-term basis. It has become clear that the authorities had no plan B in case of a catastrophic deterioration in the security and weather situation. However, the Putin gang's insidious plan would not have been so painful if it weren't for the vulnerability of the municipal infrastructure caused by Kyiv's leaders. Mayor Vitali Klitschko has already called on all those who can to leave Kyiv. This leads to the conclusion that the authorities are unable to solve the problems of a city that is far from the front line.
