October was a month of the streets, and this issue follows a wave of youth and housing protest across southern and western Europe while three elections went against the right. In France, Léon Crémieux traces the groundswell that threatens Macron, from the secondary-school blockades to 17 October, "a historic day of mobilization" comparable to the pension protests of 2023; Olivier Besancenot finds reasons to believe, Antoine Larrache judges the movement stronger from the outset than the 2006 fight against the CPE, and NPA-l'Anticapitaliste demands the resignation of the ministers Nuñez and Geffray over the repression of pupils. Crémieux's second piece asks where class-struggle trade unionism stands as 2027 approaches.
